Anthony J. Annucci

New York State Department of Corrections and Community Supervision

It is impossible to succinctly reflect upon the past two years or sum up all that has occurred within the Department since the last edition of DOCCS Today. At that point in time, we had no idea that the world as we knew it, would be upended and thrust into a new “normal”, that still very much affects us today.

Each and every member of this Department has been impacted by the pandemic—losing family, friends, colleagues and neighbors; missing graduations, weddings and holidays with loves ones; and experiencing isolation, frustration and burnout. It has been a challenging time of uncertainty; yet, day in and day out, our staff never ceased in carrying out the important work that helps keep our facilities and communities safe.

The pandemic wasn’t the only challenge the members of this Department faced in 2020 and 2021. We navigated legislative changes that posed significant challenges for both corrections and community supervision staff; assaults on staff have increased at alarming rates, though the population continues to decline; and the last two enacted budgets have led to the closure of nine facilities—the decision for which is never taken lightly—but nonetheless, each closure deeply impacts the lives of our staff and their loved ones, as well as the surrounding community.

In this vein, I am reminded of the wintertime classic, “It’s A Wonderful Life,” which, thanks to the generosity of two of the movie’s original actors, who visited Attica in 2018, you may have seen the movie playing in one of our facilities or community supervision offices during this past holiday season. The movie’s message, though, rings true all year-round: you are important, the work you do touches more lives than you could ever know, and a fresh perspective can make all the difference in the world.

If you are ever in doubt that one person's actions can make a difference, I encourage you to read on and learn of the tremendous impact our staff and the incarcerated and parolee populations have made, both inside our facilities and offices, and within the surrounding communities. Though it was far more difficult to perform these acts of kindness in the midst of a global health crisis, our staff stepped up when it mattered most, and they managed to give back to those in need. I am continually in awe of all that the members of this Department are able to accomplish, and I look forward to seeing what 2022 has in store.

Throughout the pandemic, the Puppies Behind Bars training graduations continued in DOCCS’ facilities

On Saturday, January 8, 2022, Commissioner Annucci received the Michael Francke Career Achievement Award at the annual Correctional Leaders Association (CLA) winter conference in Phoenix, Arizona.

The Michael Francke Career Achievement Award was created to recognize a CLA member who has given outstanding service to the agency in which they have served, in honor and memory of Mr. Francke, who was slain in the line of duty in 1989.

Governor Hochul nominated Commissioner Annucci for this award and, in her nomination letter, highlighted the Commissioner’s progressive leadership throughout his career and significant contributions not only to the field of corrections, but to the criminal justice system in New York State. He has been recognized by a number of professional organizations throughout his tenure and truly embodies the spirit of the Michael Francke Career Achievement Award.

Throughout his tenure as Acting Commissioner, and his career with DOCCS, Commissioner Annucci has espoused and embodied the servant model of leadership and always put his staff first, recognizing that the Department could not accomplish its mission without each and every one of its employees. He constantly strives to improve staff wellness, give them the tools to be successful, and ensure that they know how much they are appreciated. He has maintained a steady course for the Department to achieve the mission he set forth to ensure public safety by operating safe and secure facilities, preparing individuals for release, and then supervising them to be successful when they return home from prison, while ensuring that staff safety and opportunity for advancement remain at the forefront.

Meet Duke and Scooby! These two pups are the newest arrivals to the Canine Training Program at Hale Creek Correctional Facility. They will work with teams of incarcerated individuals over the next few months to learn training and socialization skills that will eventually help them find their forever homes.

Approximately 37-47% of all household in the United States have a dog, however more than 3.9 million dogs enter shelters annually. Many reasons contribute to why these animals end up in a shelter. Common myths are that the dog has something wrong or is aggressive or ill. In fact, people surrender their dog for many reasons - not able to afford to care for the animal, not having enough space, or not being able to have a pet when they move.

In order to give a second chance to sheltered dogs and strengthen the possibility that some of them get adopted, a program was developed to train and socialize them using incarcerated individuals as trainers.

The program teaches incarcerated individuals valuable marketable job skills, saves canine lives, and gives eligible incarcerated individuals an opportunity to obtain a feeling of satisfaction and self-worth by providing foster care and basic obedience training to sheltered dogs while enhancing the incarcerated individual’s social and employability skills. Additionally, it gives the incarcerated individuals an opportunity to return something positive to the community – a healthy and well socialized dog.

Partnering shelters provide dogs and certified dog trainers to instruct the incarcerated individual on how to properly care for and train the dogs. For the duration of the training, the dogs are socialized through interaction with people and other animals. Each dog is taught obedience skills such as how to heel, sit and stay.

The shelter dogs are placed within the prison for approximately 8 weeks of 24/7 obedience training and socialization provided by the trained incarcerated individual.

Every year, Hudson Valley Women in Corrections and Community Supervision (HVWICCS) hosts a training which selects a local charity to donate proceeds to. This year’s selected charity was Bottomless Closet. Bottomless Closet embodies the philosophy of women helping women, and in doing so, creates a safe and welcoming environment for women to receive the resources needed to help them succeed in the workplace. Some resources include providing appropriate interview attire and attending workshops that boosts their confidence to interview and present themselves professionally. Thanks to HVWICCS’ participants, they were able to raise $4,000 for Bottomless Closet’s program.
